Community Service

A few members of the organization this past spring semester helped with the Hurricane Katrina Relief Program. With the help of members from the Campus Crusade group, Black Men United got to lend its helping hand to people who were far away but close to their hearts. The Katrina Relief was the biggest community service project of the past year but members of BMU are also advent participants of Bobcat Build, mentoring programs, and overall volunteers for the city of San Marcos.

Center for Multicultural and Gender Studies

The Center for Multicultural and Gender Studies (MCGS) is a part of the College of Liberal Arts, one of the seven colleges at Texas State University—San Marcos (Texas State). MCGS was established at the beginning of the 1984 academic year. It assists students in preparing for a pluralistic society by providing faculty and students with resources that encourage the infusion of an interdisciplinary curriculum that addresses race, class, gender, and ethnicity. MCGS provides and administers the U.S. Ethnic Studies minor at the undergraduate level and the Women's Studies minor at the graduate and undergraduate levels. In addition, MCGS has sponsored a variety of co-curricular events aimed at expanding the discourse on ethnicity and gender.
